A Profile in Enduring Service – Craig Bond By Barbara Roques Shaping the Future and Preserving the Past

There is no shortage of Lucketts citizens who generously donate their time in service to others, and while they do not seek publicity, their stories provide an opportunity for us to consider our own contributions. In 1968, Craig Bond volunteered for an Army pilot training program, knowing that he would almost certainly be sent to Vietnam. Serving his country at the age of 18 forged his commitment to service throughout his life. Craig describes himself as “just a guy who wants to help Veterans and improve the fabric of our society,” and after a 31-year career in the U.S. Army, he continues to serve his community today.
